2. USP, SYNOPSIS & STATEMENT

Unique Selling Point

Written and directed by Venice Lion winner Jessica Woodworth (BE/US), LUKA is a gripping black-and-white audiovisual tour de force set in stunning Sicilian locations and starring Berlinale 'Shooting Star' Jonas Smulders, as well as Geraldine Chaplin and Jan Bijvoet, and featuring music from Teho Teardo, which tells the compelling story of Luka, a young soldier craving battle, who embeds himself in an isolated fort where men have been waiting in vain for ages for a mythical enemy to strike. Inspired by Dino Buzzati's novel 'Il deserto dei Tartari' ('The Tartar Steppe')

Logline

Luka, a young soldier craving battle, embeds himself in an isolated fort where men have been waiting in vain for ages for a mythical enemy to strike.

Synopsis

Luka, a young and ambitious soldier, embeds himself in the legendary Fort Kairos where heroic warriors defend the remains of civilization. His hopes to serve as an elite sniper are crushed when he is assigned to maintenance and must submit to the code of Kairos: obedience-endurance-sacrifice. As he rises through the ranks, Luka finds joy and strength in friendships with Konstantin, an enigmatic radar engineer, and Geronimo, a light-hearted private.

Director's statement

LUKA was inspired by the book Il deserto dei Tartari ('The Tartar Steppe'), by Dino Buzzati, a haunting masterpiece that has as many interpretations as readers. LUKA, the film, transposes the premise of the story to a wind-swept, parched earth of the future that reflects our deepening climate emergencies. The evocations of profound solitude, the engaging hero, the sheer absurdity of waiting endlessly for an enemy to appear and the magnitude of the landscapes offered the core ingredients. The protagonists inhabit a run-down military-industrial complex, Fort Kairos, that serves no obvious purpose. Stretching northwards are mountains of ash that harbour their deepest fears and hopes. They are all held hostage by illusions and to the march of time that renders their existence increasingly absurd. Luka's hunger for war slowly subsides as he falls under the mysterious spell of Fort Kairos and into the comfort of newfound friendships with two fellow soldiers, Konstantin and Geronimo. Their bond brings warmth and light into their otherwise bleak world until things take a tragic turn. The entire story is built towards Luka's understated yet fiercely courageous final act of defiance that causes Fort Kairos to fall. A colossal unfinished dam in Sicily and the awe-inspiring slopes of Mount Etna provided the ideal stage for LUKA.
